Why it's cool: The Riverview offices of Ring Power Corp., a dealer of tractors and other lines of equipment, house more than 300 employees in a glossy space that is roomy and recently renovated.

What's more, the office is nearly paperless, said VP and regional sales manager Tommy Ball. "This place was filled with old filing cabinets. [Now] the average cube has one filing cabinet with two drawers."

How it happened: Back in 2006, Ring Power was quickly outgrowing its windowless space. Instead of tearing down the nearly 20-year-old facility, the company decided to renovate. By July of that year, the majority of personnel had moved into temporary offices, many in a doublewide trailer.

Four months later, they returned to larger workspaces, spacious common areas, and views of the pond and landscaped grounds.

The renovation, which is ongoing, will cost in the neighborhood of $50 million, Ball said.
